

Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, and his supporters celebrate being re-elected for a fourth term, with the Labour party retaining overall control of the Council

HACKNEY VOTES

HACKNEY'S Mayor, Jules Pipe, has been re-elected for a fourth term, with the Labour party retaining overall control of the Council.

Once again the borough turned a sea of red, with Labour winning all but seven of the 57 seats on the Council. Mayor Pipe won 40,858 votes, securing 59 per cent of residents' first choice preferences.

Speaking after the election count, at the Britannia Leisure Centre in Shoreditch, he said: "This result is a vote of confidence in what the team at the Town Hall has achieved over the past 12 years, and I am very grateful to the people of Hackney for putting their faith in me once more.

"People here voted for us on our record: freezing Council Tax for nine years, delivering school improvements, and creating one of the country's largest affordable housing programmes. But they also voted for our values of fairness and tackling inequality. My priority is to make sure that Hackney's rapid economic growth benefits everyone who lives here."

The overall political make-up of the Council remained unchanged, with Labour taking 50 seats, the Conservatives four, and the Liberal Democrats three.

Hackney also bucked a national trend, with UKIP failing to gain any seats in the borough.

People on Hackney's electoral register were able to vote in three separate elections for their Mayor, local ward councillors, and Members of the European Parliament (MEPs).

Some 69,146 residents turned out to vote (39.61 per cent of the local electorate).

Voting took place on 22 May, between 7am and 10pm, at polling stations across the borough.

Members of the Mayor's Cabinet will be formally announced at the Council's Annual General Meeting on 11 June, along with a new Speaker of Hackney and membership of Council committees.

Hackney's Mayor and ward councillors are elected every four years, and they will serve 21 new areas after boundaries were redrawn last year.

Votes in the European Parliament elections were due to be counted on 25 May.

For more on the elections, see pages 2 to 4.

Candidates, counters and campaigners wait anxiously at the election count at Britannia Leisure Centre in Shoreditch on 23 May

Final countdown

HUNDREDS of people packed out the Britannia Leisure Centre in Shoreditch in tense anticipation of the local and mayoral election results on 23 May.

Candidates and party activists waited anxiously for hours as thousands of votes were counted and recounted. It was the culmination of months of door-to-door canvassing by parties and individual electoral hopefuls.

The adrenaline in the room rose as the results were read out by the Council's Chief Executive and Returning Officer, Tim Shields, each one followed by whoops and cheers. One of the first announcements was that Jules Pipe had been re-elected as Mayor of Hackney for a fourth time.

He said: "When I first became Mayor, the challenge was sorting out Hackney Council. The challenges are different now, and in some ways greater; housing, population growth, and of course the great financial challenge that faces all local government.

"We spoke to tens of thousands of local people during the campaign, and that conversation will carry on over the next four years, making sure that we face these challenges together."

"Hackney is a fantastically diverse borough and I love that about here. There are a lot of different opinions and views, with a lot of different attitudes to voting, but it's important that people do have an opinion." Danny Bates, Green party candidate for Stoke Newington

"There's been a lot of energy across the borough, not just in our elected wards." Ben Mathis, the borough agent for Lib Dems invested in and committed to the democratic process.

Ian Peacock, 49, a Labour party canvasser, said: "It's important to vote in all elections, including local."

Danny Bates, Green party candidate for Stoke Newington, added: "I've been speaking to a lot of people, in Stoke Newington in particular, and what's interesting is that some people are really engaged in the elections."

"It's been tiring for most people here. A lot of votes have been counted. It's an apprehensive time for a lot of people, but we are excited."

Nicola Benjamin, canvasser for the Conservatives in De Beviour ward, said: "There's a good vibe here. All the parties know each other, so even though it's competitive, and we understand we need votes, we are all singing from the same hymn sheet."

Ben Mathis, the borough agent for Lib Dems, said:

"We've been working very hard up until today, there's been a lot of energy across the borough, not just in our elected wards."

"All in all it's been good natured with a lot of banter, but we have kept it mature."

EXPLORE the history, cultures and languages of Gypsy, Roma and Traveller communities in Hackney this June, and find out more about the borough's history.

Communities across Britain will be celebrating Gypsy, Roma and Traveller History Month to raise awareness and explore the history of the largest ethnic minority community in the European Union.

Britain's 300,000 Gypsies, Roma and Travellers have lived, worked and travelled throughout Britain for over 500 years, yet little is known about their history and culture. The result is a widespread ignorance about who they are, which sometimes turns to hatred, fear and misunderstanding.

They have been part of Hackney's rich and diverse community for hundreds of years, having been passing through and living in the area for five centuries. It is estimated that there are currently about 600 to 800

Gypsies and Travellers living in Hackney, including around 300 children.

Throughout June, the Council and the London Gypsy and Traveller Unit are set to hold a series of free family events to help raise awareness of these communities in Hackney.

Events throughout the month of celebrations will include interactive workshops in borough libraries, a poster competition for borough schools, and a film at the Rio Cinema.

Letters from the First World War

AN exhibition of letters sent by soldiers to their loved ones during the First World War opened at Hackney Museum this month.

'Writing Home – Letters to Hackney during the First World War' marks the centenary of the start of the Great War, which was one of the deadliest conflicts in history. More than nine million combatants and seven million civilians were killed during the war, which Britain joined on 4 August 1914, and which continued until 11 November 1918.

The exhibition showcases letters written to families and sweethearts in Hackney, including those from two young soldiers who fought on the front line.

One letter, held by Hackney Archives and written by Alexander Dyall of Clapton on 6 April, 1916, said: "You would be surprised how soon you get used to sleeping on boards and how expert you get at shutting people up when they start to snore. You smack hard on the floor with a book and if that does not do you spring out of bed and jab a lump of soap in his mouth with force."

Alexander's last letter was sent on 9 October, 1917, after which he went missing at the Battle of Passchendaele in Belgium, presumed dead.

Other letters, by Joseph Hughes, were sent to his sweetheart Elizabeth Ann Shillingford (Lizzie), who he went on to marry at the end of the war.

The letters and other artefacts give an intimate glimpse into the day-to-day lives of servicemen during the conflict, and the impact the war had on them and their families.

Staff at the Council-run museum would like to hear from residents willing to share their family stories or personal items dating from this period in history. This includes people who may have been born in another part of the world, or served in the armed forces of a different country.

The free exhibition is on at Hackney Museum until 30 August.

Cyclists in for a wheely good time

THE annual Hackney Cycling Conference is set to kick off a full programme of biking events across the borough next month.

Now in its third year, the conference will bring together cycling experts and enthusiasts at Hackney Picturehouse on 6 June.

High profile speakers include Klaus Bondam, director of the Danish Cyclists' Federation; Andrew Gilligan, the London Cycling Commissioner; Dr Rachel Aldred, lecturer in transport at Westminster University; and John Dales, director of Urban Movement, which specialises in planning streets, spaces and transport.

Klaus, who is the former Mayor of Copenhagen, said: "I can think of no other tool as the bicycle to re-create, re-generate and re-start our cities in a more liveable and sustainable way."

The Council will launch a smartphone app – CycleHackney – at the event, which will enable riders to plan, track and compare routes by bike.

Plus, in the evening, the Picturehouse is set to show a programme of short films about cycle-friendly projects from around the world.

The conference is hosted by the Council, Hackney Cycling Campaign, and Movement for Liveable London. Tickets cost £25 for the full day and include lunch. Tickets to see the short films cost £5.

On 7 June, the Hackney Cycling Campaign will host another showcase event at Hackney City Farm and Haggerston Park. Members of Hackney BMX Club will be on hand to offer drop-in sessions, and freestylers will show off their moves.

Enthusiasts can also learn how to fix their bikes, or purchase something at a jumble sale hosted by London Bike Kitchen, a Hoxton workshop that teaches people how to fix their own bikes with help from on-site mechanics.

There will also be a cargo bike display and a demonstration by the London Bike Polo Association. The day will conclude with a pedal-powered film screening at Hackney City Farm.

Hackney is one of the most diverse places in the UK. In this regular feature, we profile the borough's great & good or just plain interesting

The Oxbridge connection

KEN Warman, principal of BSix College in Clapton, has witnessed – and to an extent been part of – the transformation of schools in the borough.

Born in 1955, in inner city Nottingham, Ken was the first person in his family to go to university.

He says: “It was beyond our family’s imagination.”

He studied history at St Catherine’s College, Oxford, but did not flex his teaching muscles until after working for British Rail for a couple of years.

“It was important to take a break from education, even though many of my friends went straight into teaching after leaving university,” he says.

So why teaching? Ken continues: “I benefitted greatly from education and loved history as a subject. It’s an interesting way of looking at the world, to use what happened in the past as your centre of perspective.

“I couldn’t imagine doing anything else professionally, apart from being a drummer in a jazz band.”

Ken felt it was particularly important that he worked in institutions that reflected his own upbringing, adding that he did not want to work in a ‘leafy suburb’.

He began teaching in 1982 at Wakefield College, West Yorkshire, then moved to Bridgwater College, Somerset in 1994, where he encouraged students to try for a place at Oxford and Cambridge, something he has continued to do throughout his career.

“I wanted to be immersed in the community where I worked, it was important for me to be committed to the area”

He is proud of the fact that during his final year at Tower Hamlets College, where he worked for four years from 2002, three students were accepted into Oxford.

Ken became principal of BSix in 2006. The college had been under a lot of scrutiny in its first years. It opened in 2002 and was meant to be the first of 11 similar institutions across the country. But the other 10 schools never materialised. There were consequent teething problems and its very future was being reconsidered.

By 2005, however, its Ofsted reports had started to improve, beginning a steady upward climb. Under Ken’s leadership the variety of courses on offer was expanded to include more vocational subjects.

He also founded the Pem-Brooke scheme in 2008, a collaboration between BSix and Pembroke College, which enables Hackney students to attend summer schools at Oxford in a bid to encourage more local young people to apply to top universities.

Its success prompted the development of a wider ‘Raising Aspirations’ programme in the same year, which pairs A-level students with universities that specialise in their chosen area of study.

Participating universities include Cambridge, Queen Mary University of London, and East Anglia.

The scheme was developed by Ken and Dr Peter Claus, a lecturer who divides his time between Pembroke College and BSix.

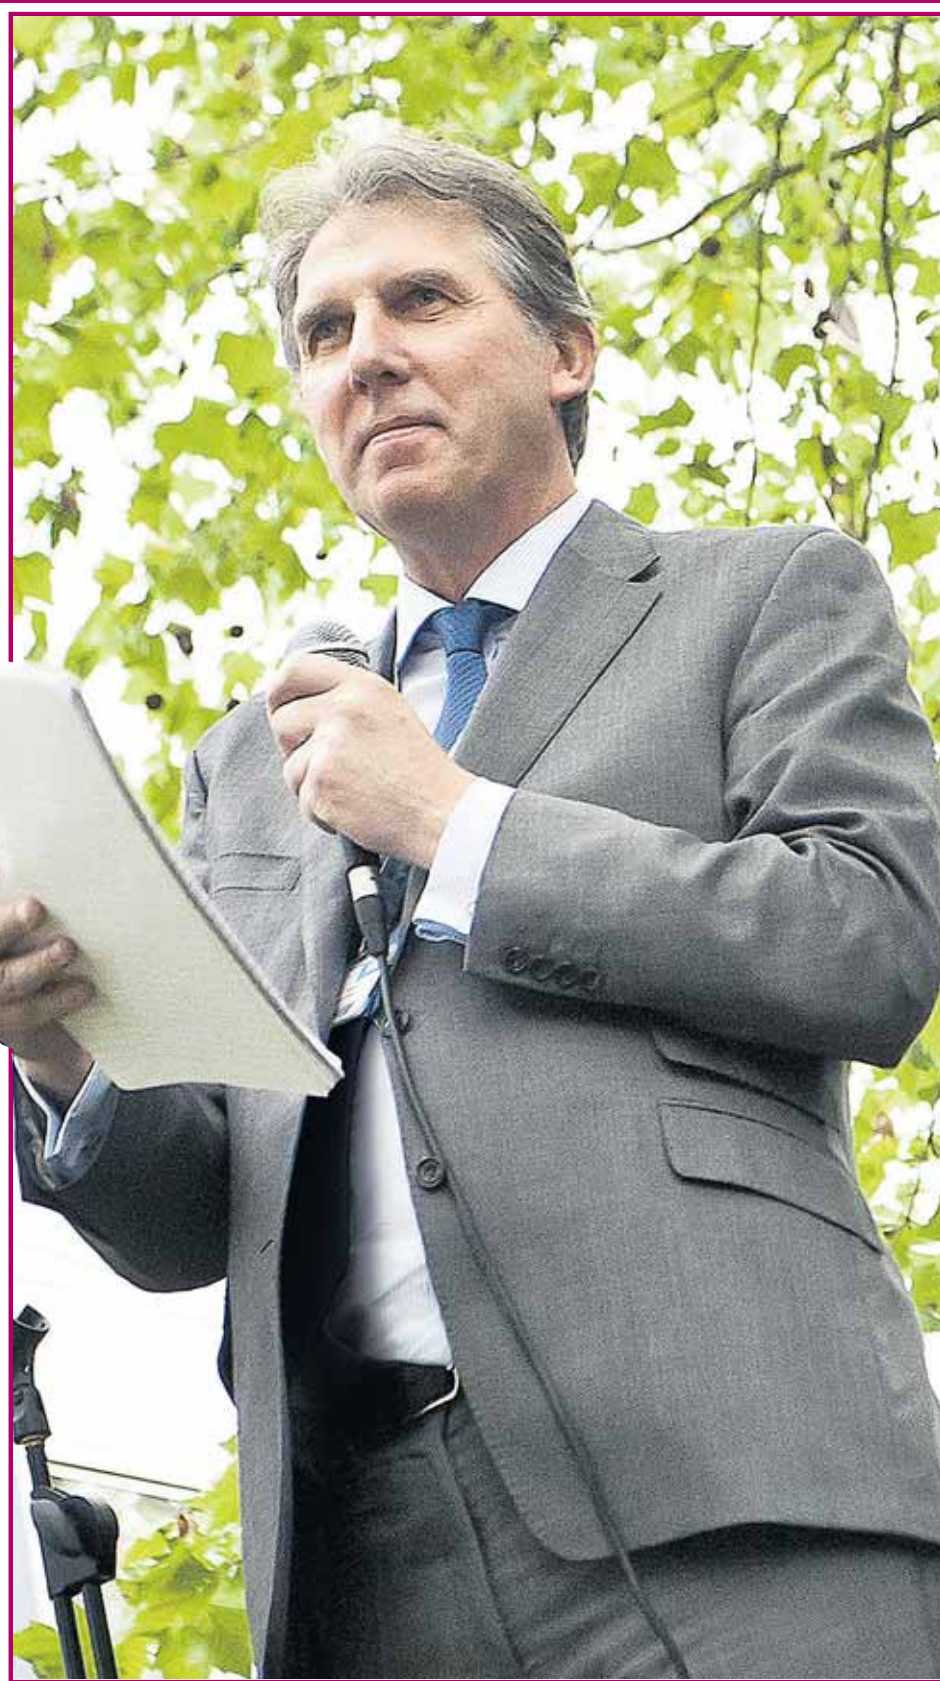

Ken says: “We want our students to aspire to the very best. We are proud of our students, of the diversity between cultures and lifestyles. We celebrate it.”

Following the development of the programme and the subsequent improvement in students’ results, Ken received the accolade ‘Principal of the Year’ from the Learning and Skills Improvement Service in 2012.

He even moved to Hackney to be across the road from the school in 2008. He says: “I wanted to be immersed in the community where I worked, it was important for me to be committed to the area.”

Ken admits he was surprised by the speed at which Hackney, and especially the area around the college in Clapton has developed.

Adding: “I’ve seen areas change before, but usually over a longer period of time. In the past 18 months the transformation here has been amazing.”

Volunteers refurbish second-hand bikes: The Bike Project has so far redistributed 350 bikes to refugees and asylum seekers in need

Wheels of fortune

A HAGGERSTON charity is recruiting volunteers to help refurbish bicycles that are donated to asylum seekers and refugees on low incomes.

The project has so far redistributed 350 bicycles to those in need, giving many asylum seekers and refugees a cheap mode of transport which can give them access to new resources.

The charity also runs a series of bike fixing workshops for anyone keen to volunteer, gain

“A bike provides refugees and asylum seekers with free, sustainable means to access resources and services”

new skills and meet new people.

Jem Stein, director of the Bike Project, said: “Refugees and asylum seekers are often forced to live around the outskirts of London and have very little money.

“A bike provides them with free, sustainable means to access resources and services such as basic amenities, healthcare and education.”

The bikes are either donated by the public or reclaimed by the police. Volunteers do not have to have a mechanical background, just an interest in the project.

Clissold Park celebrates 125 years of public opening with 3 million visitors in a year

CLISSOLD Park is set to celebrate 125 years since opening to the public, as well as having more than three million visitors last year.

Counters were installed last May to measure park usage and the three millionth visitor was reached this month. It is a fitting tribute to the appeal of the N16 park and 18th century mansion house set within it, which is one of London's most popular wedding venues.

Next month will mark 125 years since the park and house were first opened to the public. A ‘Clissold 125’ event is being planned by the park user group, culminating in a ‘Big Birthday Party’ on 21 June, featuring activities for all ages, including live music in the cafe garden and a children's theatre show at the Old Bowling Green.

Clissold Park's facilities include a multi-use games area, food growing area, pond dipping platform, paddling pool, table tennis, tennis courts, wheels park, butterfly dome, children's play area and an aviary and animal enclosure.

The anniversary year will also be marked by a series of further improvements that will restore the drinking fountain; build a new tennis clubhouse with office space, meeting rooms, a small tennis shop, kitchen and changing facilities; and refurbish the bridge across the New River.

Hervé Constant

31 May-1 June, Space 29, 10 Martello Street, E8 3PE

HACKNEY-based French artist Hervé Constant is set to showcase his latest work at Space Studio, Martello Street. The exhibition centres around some of his 22 paintings of the Major Arcana (a suit of cards in the Tarot deck). Each depicts a scene, mostly featuring a person or several people, with many symbolic elements. The art show will also feature a short film called 'Tarot - A Journey of the Soul' on 31 May. The film delves into the origins of tarot and how it started out as an oral tradition among tribes, only fairly recently being translated into pictorial cards. Madelyn Freeman, a cognitive psychologist, will then lead a conversation to help better understand tarot's mystical origins and its ability to reflect and predict patterns representing future events. Encaustic, acrylic and oil paintings will be exhibited alongside limited edition artist books and silkscreen prints available to purchase.

REVIEW

Waiting for Godot

Arcola Theatre, 24 Ashwin Street, E8 3DL, until 14 June

THE blighted tree that graces a bare stage with its presence in Samuel Beckett's 'Waiting for Godot' has become something of an icon in theatre.

But in Simon Dormand's not-so-sparse production of the play at the Arcola Theatre in Dalston, the set is flooded with rubble; a flight of metal stairs and a persistent tap dripping from off-stage lend the impression that we are in an abandoned cellar, empty of human presence but for a boot, which protrudes ominously from the rubble. For a play in which famously 'nothing happens', this interpretation is imbued with an infectious energy, which begins the moment Vladimir (Tom Palmer) lugs his battered mate Estragon (Tom Stourton) out of the mound of bricks where he has spent the night.

Whilst 'Didi' and 'Gogo' are in other productions played by older men, ruefully contemplating the vagaries of their existence, here they are like two ragged overgrown teenagers desperately trying to escape the threat of their own boredom. The duo find countless ways of passing the time, each of which poke fun mercilessly at the entrapped audience. The characters tirelessly bat conversation at each other like professional ping-pong players, endeavouring to entertain themselves until the arrival of Godot, or nightfall, (nightfall always comes first).

The tyrannical Pozzo (Jonathan Oliver) and his strangled slave Lucky (Michael Roberts) disrupt Didi and Gogo's boredom. Gradually, the characters become more and more inert, more dependent on one another, and more exasperated at their inescapable plight. I haven't seen a version of this play which crashes so suddenly from comic hysteria to severe pathos. By Victoria Walvis

Garden school wins architecture award

ASCHOOL in Stoke Newington for pupils with autism has won a prestigious architectural award, marking it out as one of the best new buildings in London.

The Garden school, which opened last September, was honoured by the Royal Institute of British Architects (RIBA). The 150-capacity school was constructed as part of the Council's Building Schools for the Future programme to rebuild or refurbish every secondary and special educational needs school in the borough.

“The panel was impressed... by the commitment and quality as exemplified by the Garden School”

It was designed by Golifer & Langston Architects, and built by McLaren Construction, on the site of Horizon school, in Wordsworth Road.

It brings together the former Horizon and Downsview schools on the N16 site to better suit the needs of pupils, who will no longer have to change schools at secondary age.

It boasts state of the art facilities designed to help pupils with autism flourish. Features include a splash pool, soft play rooms, and a community cafe which is run by older students to prepare them for life in the working world.

The Council and its Local Education Partnership also received the RIBA London award for client of the year, to honour Hackney's ongoing commitment to architectural excellence with its programme of school rebuilding and refurbishment.

Hackney beat stiff competition from Network Rail, the Olympic Delivery Authority, The Shard, National Theatre, and other local authorities.

Jonathan Ellis-Miller, chair of the London region RIBA awards panel, said: “The panel was impressed not only by the commitment and quality as exemplified by the Garden School project, but by the long term commitment to design excellence that is exemplified by a range of projects in Hackney.”

SEN update

MAJOR national changes to the way children with special education needs (SEN) are supported, are due to come into force on 1 September. To help families prepare, Hackney Today will feature information about services every month.

Info sessions available

WITH the start date for the national special educational needs and disability reforms fast approaching, the Council, Hackney Learning Trust (HLT) and parents groups are busy working with staff from schools, social care and health, to look at what the changes mean and how the new legislation will work in Hackney.

They are also working with Hackney Independent Parents Group (HIP) and Hackney Parent Partnership to ensure messages about the changes reach all those who will be affected.

The main changes centre around the phasing out of statements, which will be replaced by education health and care plans. This means a child's needs will be addressed in one plan.

The identification stages of 'school action' and 'school action plus' will also be phased out, replaced with one stage called 'SEN support'. The idea is to give children and families a greater say over the support they receive. The first information session, co-hosted by HLT and HIP, will take place on 26 June. It will look at the impact of the reforms on schools and families and changes to the way children and young people receive support.

Parents, carers and teachers are invited to attend a morning session (10am-12noon) or afternoon session (12.30-2.30pm). To book a place call: 020 3076 1516.

The Parent Partnership Service will also hold a conference, focusing on the reforms, on 10 July.

Details will be sent via schools in early June, or parents can book a place by calling: 020 7014 7019. Further events across the borough are planned for September.

Play streets fun and games stops traffic outside Princess May Primary School

PUPILS reclaimed the street outside Princess May Primary School on 9 May for hula-hooping, skipping and games.

Around 150 children and 60 adults took part in the 'play streets' session. The N16 school is one of three in the borough to take advantage of a Council scheme which allows residents to apply to close a street to traffic for up to three hours per week or month. Since the introduction of the scheme in 2012, applications have been made to hold regular play sessions in 24 Hackney streets.

Parents at Princess May volunteered to steward the road closure by standing at barriers and redirecting traffic. Residents also helped with stewarding and joined in the fun.

Halima Begum, who has two children at the school, said: “It was fun doing the stewarding and nice to be able to help out. My children were very excited when they came out and saw they could play in the street then and there with their friends. They loved riding up and down on their bikes and doing the chalk drawing.”

Mum-of-four, Carlene Lutin, added: “I enjoyed it because the children could play freely and there were no cars about.”

Hackney was the first London borough to adopt the Play Streets scheme.

For more info, call: 07947 095 069; e-mail: hackney@playingout.net; or visit: www.playingout.net. Download an application pack for a temporary street closure at: www.hackney.gov.uk/play-streets

‘Safe and Smarter Travel’ films now online to view

BUDDING young movie directors have been busy producing short films aimed at encouraging youngsters to keep safe when they're on the move.

The two minute films were created for the Council's ‘Safe and Smarter Travel’ film competition, which is designed to pull together everything primary school pupils have learnt about road safety and sustainable travel.

The films focus on road safety during the journey to school, and the benefits of walking or cycling to school.

Kim Wright, Corporate Director for Health and Community Services, said:

“We've been really impressed by the quality of the films; not only are they well produced, but they get across some vital safety information. “The films bring together all the great work our schools are doing around road safety and sustainable travel, and I hope that lots of people will have a look at them online and take on board these important messages.”

A selection of the best films can be viewed at: www.youtube.com/user/hacknycouncil

The film with the most views between 26 May and 8 June will win a prize, as will the film judged ‘best’.

There were 2,287 cases of stroke or mini-stroke in Hackney and the City in 2012; The FAST test can help identify signs of a stroke (above right)

Act fast with mini-strokes

THE first indications of a mini-stroke should not be ignored, according to a new campaign by a leading health charity.

Thousands of people are putting themselves at risk by ignoring early warning signs. Within a week of having a mini-stroke (also known as a TIA or transient ischaemic attack) more than one in 12 people will go on to have a stroke.

A recent survey found that only one in five people experiencing symptoms of a mini-stroke ring 999. But if they were treated in time, around 10,000 strokes could be prevented annually, potentially saving more than 3,000 lives.

The symptoms are the same: weakness in the face and arms, speech problems, blurred vision, memory loss, confusion or dizziness. The only difference being sufferers of a mini-stroke start to feel better within 24 hours.

There were 2,287 cases of stroke or mini-stroke in Hackney and the City in 2012. A stroke is the fourth most common cause of death for men in Hackney and the City, and the sixth most common cause for women. Those most at risk include older residents. People from Afro-Caribbean and South East Asian communities also have an increased risk.

Jon Barrick, Chief Executive of the Stroke Association, said: “There’s nothing small about a mini-stroke. It’s a medical emergency. When the symptoms start, you should call 999 and say you may be having a stroke.”

The FAST test can help identify the signs:

- FACIAL weakness: Can the person smile? Has their mouth or eye drooped?
- ARM weakness: Can the person raise both arms?
- SPEECH problems: Can they speak clearly and understand what you say?
- TIME to call 999.

Making rubber on Kill Copper Row

By Sally England

WILMER Gardens off Hoxton Street is a quiet residential cul-de-sac. But in the 19th century it was regarded as one of the worst streets in London, a filthy rat-infested slum that was a den of thieves and prostitution, nicknamed 'Kill Copper Row'.

It was in this desperate location that Scottish engineer James George Ingram opened a small workshop in 1847, manufacturing the first ever toy balloons made of vulcanised rubber.

Ingram kept experimenting with new ways to manufacture and use rubber and his business grew rapidly. He soon moved into producing medical and surgical equipment and it was for these that the company later became best known, often carrying out specialist projects for local hospitals. Doctors would come to him with a sketch of something they wanted to be made out of rubber, and 'JG' would work out how to do it.

The Wilmer Gardens premises soon became too cramped for Ingram's expanding workload. For a while he relocated to Rainham in Essex, but afterwards decided that a larger and more central factory was essential. In 1866, he purchased farmland in Hackney Wick and built the new London India Rubber Works between Chapman and Felstead roads.

Ingram was truly a pioneer of the rubber industry, starting out working with a material that was little known at the time and putting it to a wide range of new uses.

The company created a patented method of hand-moulding rubber seamlessly to prevent pressurised items, such as hot water bottles, from bursting. It also developed export quality goods which could withstand tropical climates where untreated rubber could perish and split.

Hygienic rubber items for hospitals, as well as equipment such as feeding bottles and teething rings for babies, were Ingrams' main product line, but they still made balloons for many years, as well as sports goods such as footballs, tennis balls, cricket gloves and grips for cricket bats and tennis racquets.

During both world wars the company produced materials for the war effort, including military hats, hospital sheeting and gas masks for the First World War, and essential field hospital supplies during the Second World War.

They also developed a new and vital self-sealing rubber covering for the fuel tanks for fighter and bomber aircraft using a new manufacturing process. Production on this began in February 1941, but only a month later on the night of 19 March, the Hackney Wick factory was hit by a German bomb.

The buildings were packed with highly inflammable materials and a third of the factory was soon on fire. The water mains had also been destroyed by bomb damage so it was impossible to tackle the blaze straight away.

Several hours passed before a large hose was obtained to pump water from the Hackney Cut, though the distance to the site made this an ineffectual solution. Fire crews from nearby businesses came to help, but could do little more than keep the fire from spreading any further.

The damage was extensive and JG's sons, who were now in charge, believed that all their hard work on the new product had been lost. But staff determination to continue producing the essential rubber covering was undaunted: machines were salvaged and set up in the open air with night and day shifts organised to ensure production until the end of the war in 1945.

In the post-war period new types of plastic were developed that gradually replaced many products, and Ingrams' began to make financial losses. Eventually a receiver was appointed, and after nearly a century of making rubber goods on the same site in Hackney Wick, the plant was sold and the factory closed. Little today remains of the old London India Rubber Works.

Recipes straight from the ovens at Waterhouse

www.waterhouserestaurant.co.uk

THIS is the latest in a series of regular recipes courtesy of Waterhouse – an eco-friendly restaurant alongside the Regent's Canal in Shoreditch. Sous-chef Lorren Joseph presents pan fried hake with beetroot, carrot, chorizo and almond sauce for this month's recipe.

He says: "Hake is a very delicate, light fish which melts in the mouth when cooked to perfection. The beetroot and carrot bring earthiness to the mix, the chorizo brings spice and the almonds add to the texture creating a delicious well-balanced dish."

Pan fried hake with beetroot, carrot, chorizo and almond

Preparation time 1.2
1 hour 20 mins

Cooking time 20
mins

Ingredients

For the fish

- 2 x 180g hake
- 2 large beetroots
- 2 carrots
- 30g chopped chorizo
- 1 tbsp chopped parsley
- 1 lemon
- 10g flaked almonds
- 20g unsalted butter
- 1 lemon
- salt and pepper
- pinch of sugar.

For the salsa

- handful of chopped parsley, mint, tarragon and basil
- 1/2 tbsp capers
- splash of red wine vinegar
- glug of extra virgin olive oil.

Method

- Cook beetroots in red wine vinegar, salt, sugar and water until soft for an hour, take off the heat. When cooled, slice beetroots into circular discs and arrange the slices on plate
- To make the salsa verde, mix chopped parsley, mint, tarragon, basil, capers, red wine vinegar and a glug of olive oil until it reaches pouring consistency and set aside
- Cut the carrots into thin long strips resembling matchsticks (julienne) and then add the salsa verde. Let carrots sit in mixture until ready to use for garnish
- In a frying pan, heat oil and put fish skin side down until the edges of the fish crisps and colours. Finish cooking the fish in the oven at 180C for approximately six minutes. Add a squeeze of lemon juice and remove the fish from the pan
- Place the julienned carrots on top of the plated beetroot and then put the fish on top. Season to taste
- In the frying pan, add the chorizo with butter and add almonds, lemon juice and parsley. When heated through drizzle over the fish and serve.
